What You Should Know About Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD)

- There are no signs or symptoms
- Your risk increases with:
 - Diabetes
 - High blood pressure (hypertension)
 - Family history of kidney diseases
 - Seniors (ages 60 and over)
- Diabetes is the leading cause of kidney failure
- High blood pressure is the second leading cause of kidney failure
- Early detection can help prevent kidney failure
- There is no cure for kidney failure

CKD	GFR	Description
1	90+	Normal kidney function but urine or other abnormalities point to kidney disease. No symptoms.
2	60-89	Mildly reduced kidney function, urine or other abnormalities point to kidney disease. May not have symptoms.
3	30-59	Moderately reduced kidney function. Symptoms may include fatigue, swelling and high blood pressure.
4	15-29	Severely reduced kidney function. Symptoms such as fatigue, swelling and high blood pressure may worsen.
5		Very severe, or kidney failure. This is sometimes referred to as end stage renal disease (ESRD).

Treatment Options:

- Hemodialysis (in-center or at home)
- Peritoneal Dialysis (PD)
- Kidney Transplantation
- No Treatment

To prevent or delay kidney failure:

- Have regular check-ups with your doctor
- Take medications as prescribed
- Reduce salt in your diet
- Exercise regularly
- Stop smoking

About DCI:

- The largest non-profit dialysis provider in the United States
- Recognized by the USRDS as having the lowest hospitalization and mortality ratios among national dialysis providers since 2002
- Provides care in more than 240 outpatient clinics located across 28 states
